
NRC

The Renegades
Chapter IV: Arwen

The days passed as the ruins of Fort Maine were rid of their evil. In those hours the slaves were freed, and offered help and homes. The flowers grew and the sun shown brightly, and from far and near Sir Warren found help to build his fortress: From the mountains came the Dwarves, and from the lowlands came the Men.

And so the plans were drawn up, and those of the slaves who desired to remain were offered land and jobs a plenty. The Renegades, as there was little use for adventurers, went their ways on their various errands, leaving but Sir Warren, Kipox and Corbin, along with Og.

For a time things passed peacefully; the workers started their projects, and Knights came to serve the castle's thane. But then one day, a fair maiden approached; she was tall and beautiful, with dark hair and raven eyes. She had an Elven air, and carried a mighty bow.

She strode forward, and stopped before Sir Warren. She bowed her head and then spoke:

"You know me not, Knight, but I know of you. You once travelled far with the ones known as the Sons of Fantasy, and they were my friends. Do you remember Woodstock, Oin, Sir Aquilius, Willian, Lance and Darwin? For it was with they that we ventured into my homeworld of Berland." [See 'Chapter I: Berland' of the Sons of Fantasy in issue #5].

They spoke at length, until the Renegades had learned that she had come from her world to invite them. As they accepted, she smiled and clapped her hands: a mist arose and envelloped them, dragging them off through the planes...

The party watched as their whereabouts became clear. Before their amazed eyes they beheld a Utopian paradise! An island in a sea of fog beneath a clear blue sky, covered by mountains and green forests. Near them a Greek pillar stood beside a keg of ale, and here and there walked servants on their various errands.

"This is my home, friends. Yonder lies the palace of my father, the King of Berland." spoke Arwen.

As their eyes turned towards the mountains, they saw the palace; and this was no ordinary castle, but a white citadel as large as many cities and covering the peak of a high mountain. From its spiralling towers flew banners emblazonned with color and nobility.

That night they were presented before his majesty the king and shown to their quarters in a grand tower.

The next day they witnessed the many marvels of Berland, and heard its tale. By noon they were eager to test its magiks.

And so Arwen took them to the Great Arena, and with a word it was filled with crowds of cheering fans. Here a warrior might gain much power if he won, or lose more if he lost. Thus Kipox enterred, bearing no arms save his fists. And lo! From the other side of the court there appeared a short creature of Kipox' size and stature, and he bore no arms. The two circled long, until Kipox threw a blow to the other's chin: The fight had begun! At last Kipox was defeated, and he woed his loss. Thus the others fought, with some victorious and others not. Kipox, along with Sir Warren who also had lost, both fought again, and after bitter struggles and much bloodshed, they emerged as champions!

And so the fights were over, leaving Corbin and Willian (who had joined the party near the end of the events) with greater strengths.

While the warriors rested, seated atop long divans and couches, they engaged in one last game: Telrhin Trivia. Thus it was that Willian won, with Corbin and Kipox tying for second place.

And so, after a day, the Renegades returned to Fort Maine, having longed for the twin moons of Telrhin.

The -Renegades-
Wrapsheet

Ordway Street, January '86
Location: The ruins of Fort Maine in the Weatherpeaks.
Date : Automn 10th, 311in.
Time : First (Dawn)

About stand the tall, dominant peaks of the mountains, turning dawn into a grey twilight. All about, fog rolls along the valley floor, and dew clings to the green life about. All around you catch the smells of morning, the smells of a fresh beginning.

NOTES:

1/Does anyone want an updated edition of the Field Guide to my world?
2/The weather's getting cold, and winds are rising.
3/Don't anyone forget to use their SKILLS!
4/Who can tell me about Lorien or Loran?
5/Beware! A game of Telrhin Trivia may creep up at any time!
6/Good luck, Renegades!

SUWANE

PART I

IN A REMOTE CORNER OF THE GALAXY FLOATS A PLANET...

...ON THIS PLANET THERE LIVES A BARBARIC WORLD...

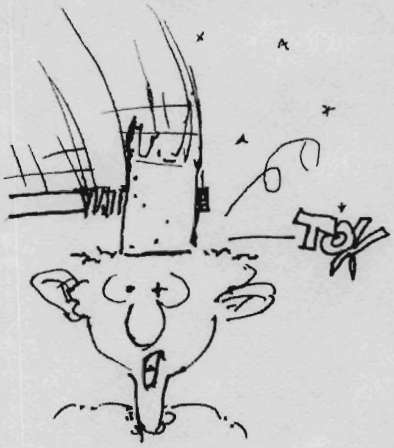

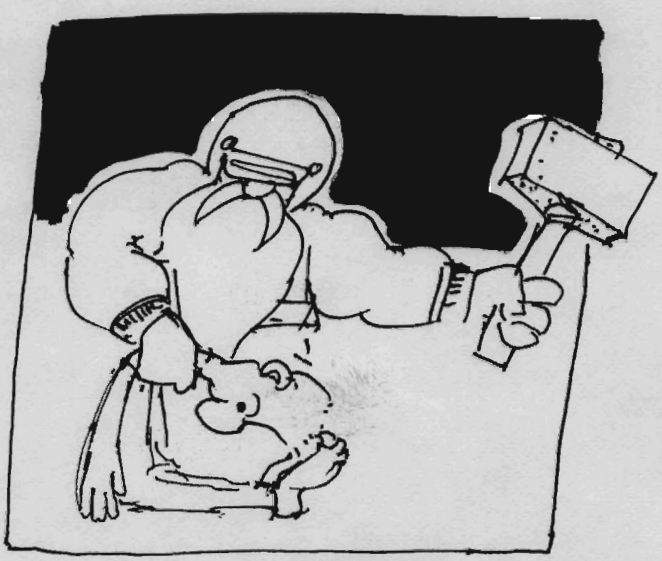

IN THE COMMON TONGUE, THIS WORLD IS KNOWN AS: "SUWANE"

IN ONE OF THESE TOWNS,

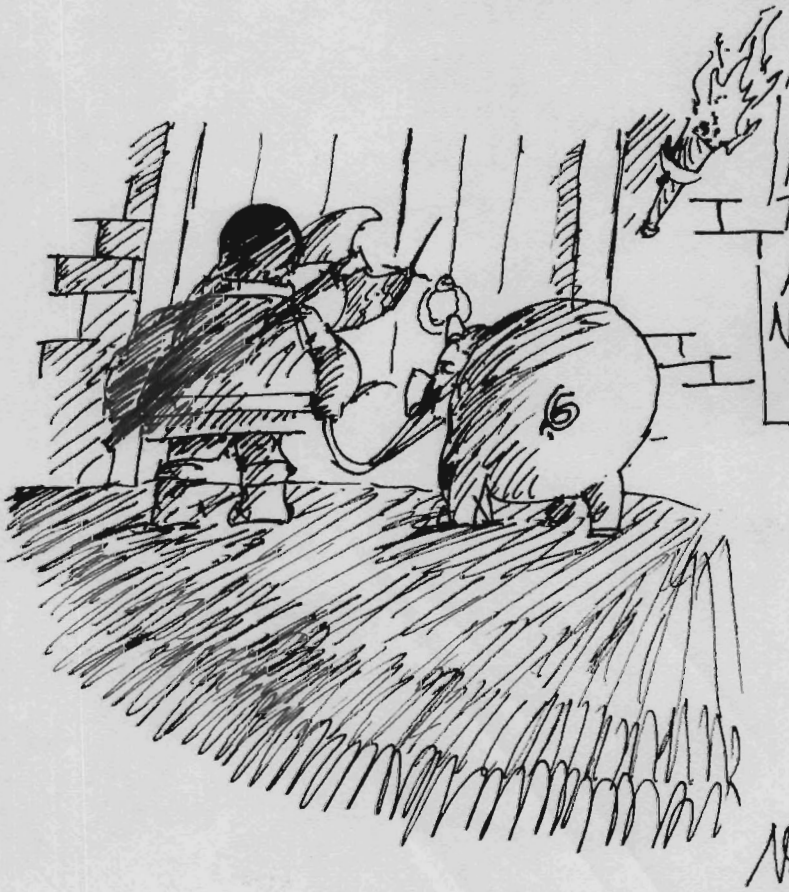

A FARMER TRAVELS TO THE NEARBY MARKET

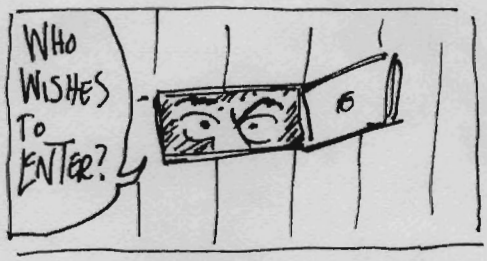

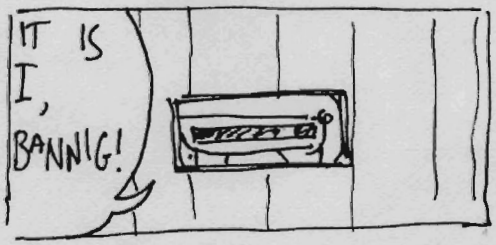

... HE NEVER GOT THERE.

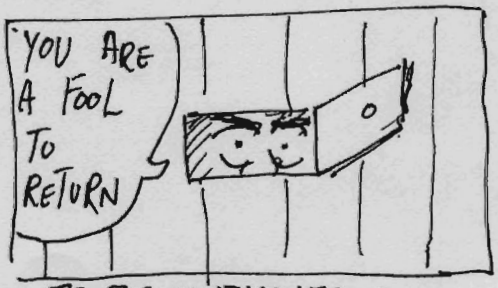

BY NIGHTFALL THEY ARRIVED AT A NEARBY TOWN.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Fables of Telrhin
Lord Karldaband & the Dragon

by C. Aldridge

*I*n times gone by, in days now old, when the land was young, there was a great hero who came from across the seas in the South. With him rode the famed Star Children, who by him stood 'til his final days in the North. But that is another story...

Thus, perched high atop the peaks of the Scarlet Hills, gazing out Southward upon the Plains of Destin, stood a mighty warrior. He was clad in plate-mail, his helm tucked under his arm, and his blond hair flew in the wind. His blue eyes wandered, and his features were lordly and fair. He bore a pleasant, dreamy smile, and he was happy; for he was young, strong, and a hero in his own time.

Nearby, lower on the mountain and sheltered from the wind, a fire burned. About the flames were the Sons of the Stars, talking merrily of great deeds and beautiful lands. As their leader appraoched, one turned and spoke:

"Yo! Karl! We really going to fight that Dragon?"

But for answer Karldaband drew his sword and lobbed off his head in a mighty stroke, his body slumping lifeless to the ground.

"I warned him never to call me that again."

But in truth the man had been a traitor, plotting their ruin. There was little that escaped Karldaband's wrath.

The next day, the party stood edging their way, backs to the mountain, along a high ledge towards the Dragon's lair. It was dawn, and the Sun was rising towards them, giving life to the lands below, and bringing golden light to the world.

Karldaband turned to the short Haffer beside him:

"Nads, are you sure this is the only way in?"

"Well, uh, it's all the Guild in Djacarthia could tell me..." mumbled the Halfling, looking skyward.

"And you payed 700 crowns for them to tell you to use the main entrance?" returned Karldaband despairingly, but with a trace of humor in his voice.

"Well, uh, think of it this way: now you'll be able to prove how heroic you are, Karl."

With a quick punch to the gut, Nads bent in two and nearly fell off the cliff.

"I TOLD you not to call me that! Oh, and next time we're in Djacarthia, remind me to blow up that guild, Nads."

The entrance was dark, and a thin smoke trailed atop the ceiling towards the exit. The beaming Sun masked their entrance as they all crept in. All apart from their Leader, who marched in, stern of face. About him were huddled the Star Children; advising, recommending, counseling and cautioning.

But Karldaband was a rash man, and never listened, even as a boy. He pushed them aside, and drawing his sword he spoke: "The best way is the quickest way. The greatest way is the bravest way. To the greater glory of myself and all who follow."

Striding confidently down the passage, he shouted:

"Show yourself, O Worm of the Air!"

Perhaps he regretted it, for the Dragon rose its ugly head and belched fire upon the one who dared disturb its rest.

Karldaband held his sword before him, and lo! It glowed blue and the flame was split where it met the sword, leaving the bearer unscathed. He strode forward, and lifting his visor, he called:

"Know ye, Worm, that your end is near. For before you stands Kardaband, the White Star!"

And with that he pointed his sword and shouted: "Anorien! Anorien!" and an electricity encircled the sword and shot forth forked lightning upon the beast.

The Dragon screamed, and thrust forward a great claw to seize its attacker. But as the arm reached out, Karldaband swung hard with both hands and severed it, the blade glowing amber.

The beast withdrew in horror, and inhaled deeply, fury rising in its eyes. Quickly the warrior stepped forward and delt a worthy blow upon the beast's neck, the sword flashing gold. But the blade glanced off the scaly hide. Now Karldaband stood directly under the great beast's head. The Dragon looked down, and just as it was about to blast the warrior, he thrust upwards into the Dragon's throat.

The sword let forth a white light that filled the room, and the star upon the warrior's head also shown white, and the blade sunk as through water to its hilt into the brain. The beast fell dead upon its hoard of wealth.

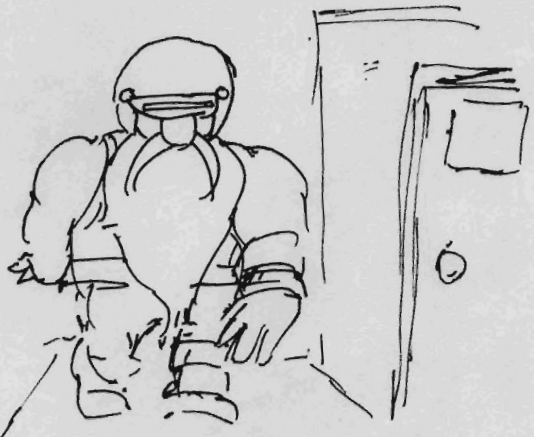

The Lord Karldaband turned towards his men and shouted: "He is dead. Very dead. Take each one item of his ill-gotten hoard,and then aid me carry the rest to the peasants and poor of Destin."

And so the Star Children went on, winning renown beneath the Sun and Stars...

SUWANE

PART II

"THE COPPER PIECE"

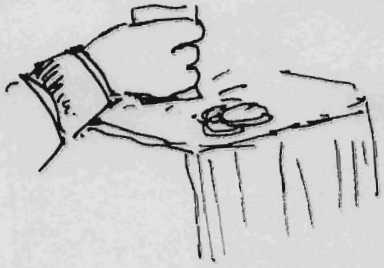

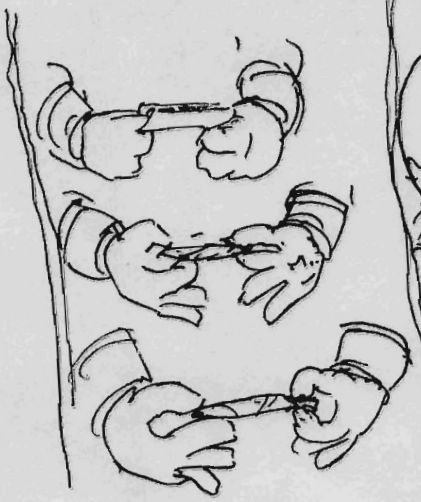

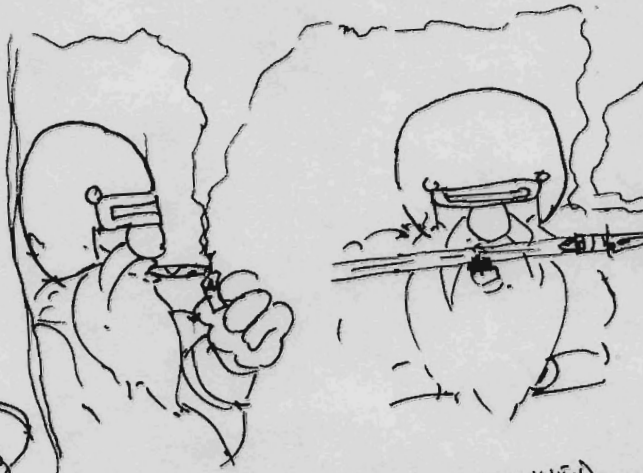

TO BE CONTINUED IN PART III "IN SEARC OF ANSWERS"

THE Adventures OF THE COMBAT RAT

by Aldridge

Many days passed as the wanderer journeyed towards ZRAN

UNTIL ONE NIGHT...

"DAMN ORC! I HAVEN'T CAUGHT A BITE WITHOUT MY SPEAR. AND SILVER DOESN'T MEAN DIDDLY-SQUAT OUT HERE IN THE MOUNTAINS..."

GROWL!

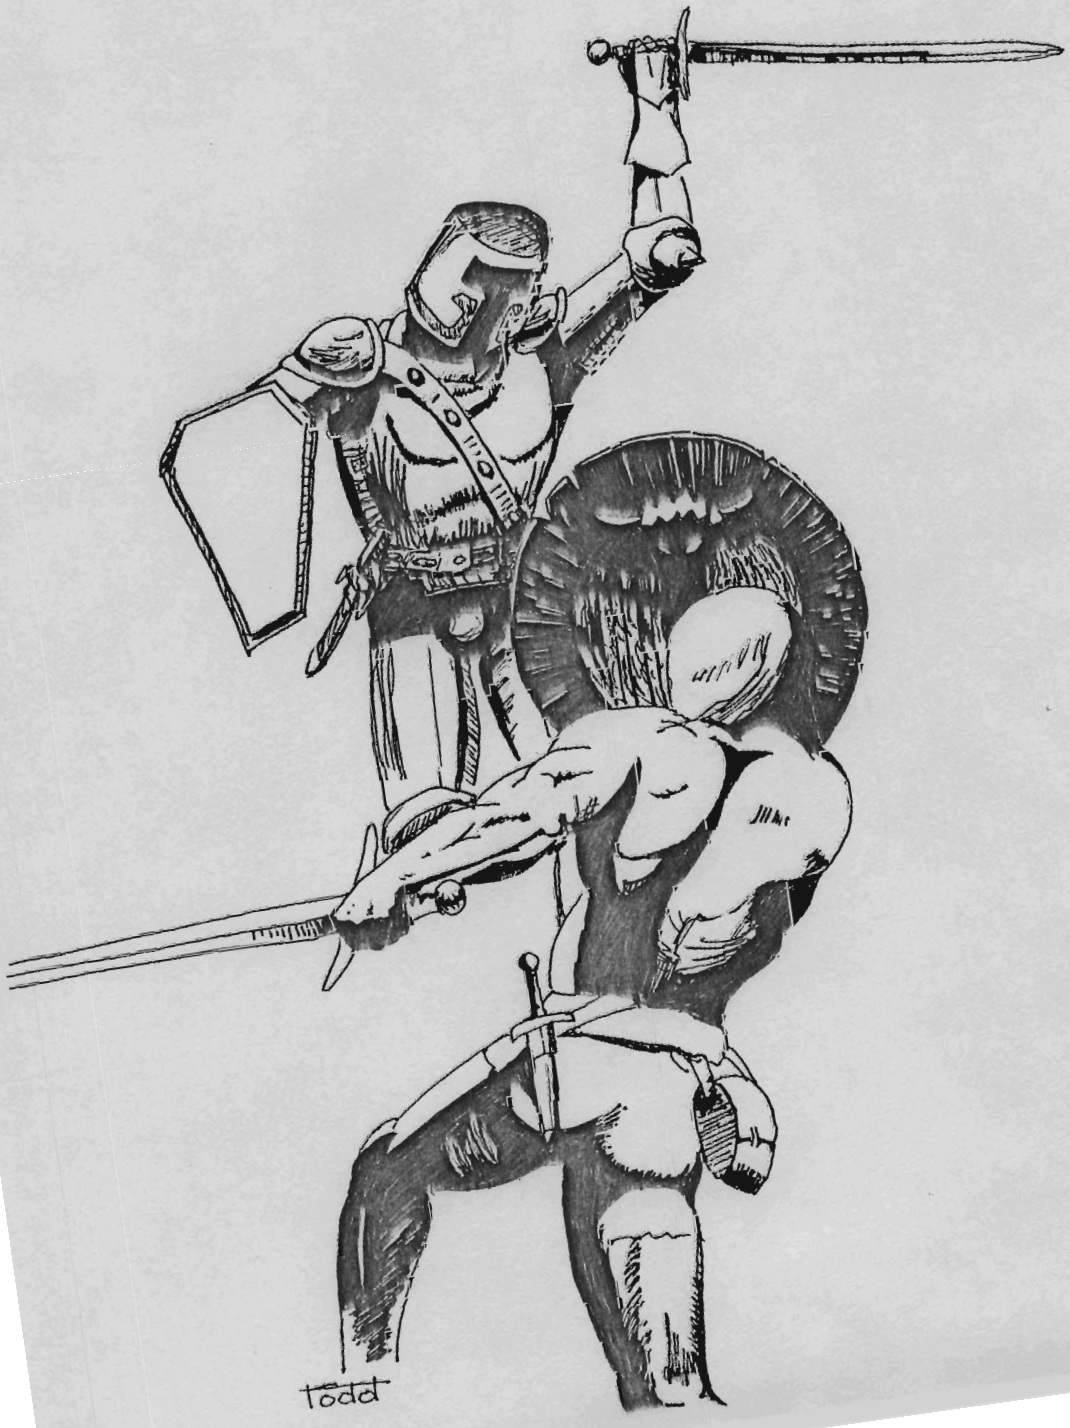

— GULP!

OVER

ROAR!
HA!
Rolling Stones
CHOMP!
AAH!
Rolling Stones
ASSHOLE!
AIE!
PHEW!
Rolling Stones
'06
CONTINUED...

TODD'S KORNER

The Rat Page
>A Rodent's Look at our Campaigns<

by the Combat Rat himself

ALDRIDGE CAMPAIGNS

Theta: All's well for the Renegades! Except maybe Willian's castle, Aquilius' fight with Manda, Sir Warren's future, Kipox, forehead... But I won't mention these. As rumour has it, some serious adventuring against their worst nightmare may be on the way. And take this: they probably know about it. Advanced Dungeons & Dragons. Next Session: Two weeks.

Star Frontiers: Good question. Four, or is it five monthes now? Anyway, you won't be waiting much longer, spacers, for the countdown has begun! Star Frontiers. Next Session: As soon as everyone can grab their blasters (and read the rules: I sure as hell don't remember them!)

GRUT CAMPAIGNS

The Campaign: Planes of the Gods? What's that? Would someone please tell me what's going on? [Editors note: I agree.] Planes of the Gods. Next Session: Our 10 year reunion at earliest.

THE Campaign: Move over, POG! We're comin' through! Nic just might start off an AD&D campaign! (About @*X&#!! time!). For more news, ask Nic. Advanced Dungeons & Dragons.

JALALI CAMPAIGNS:

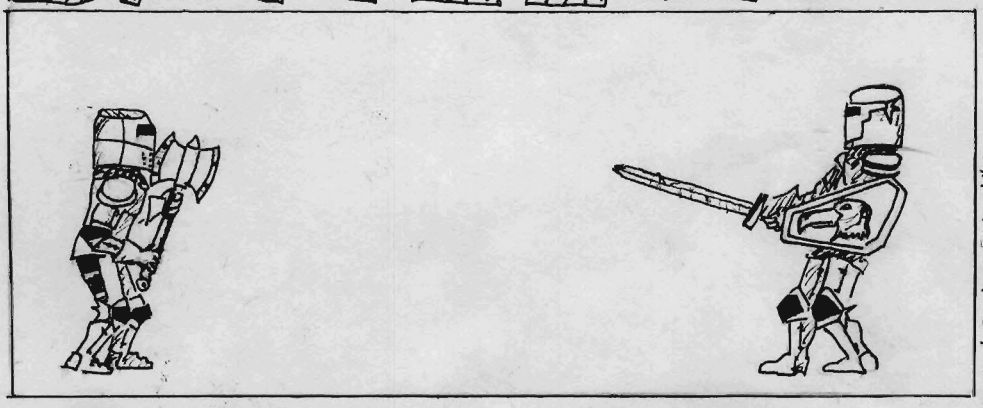

Campaign Delta: Who cares.

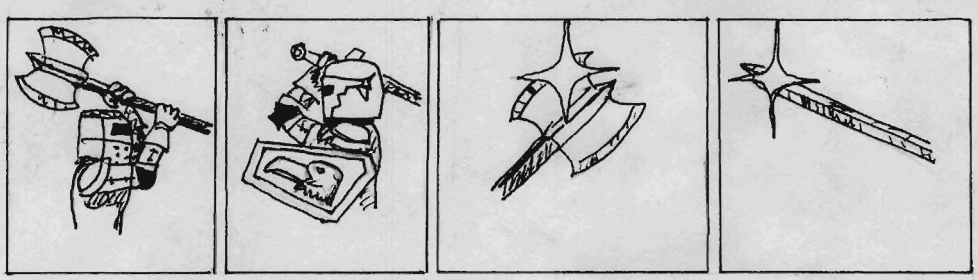

Seriously now, form what I've heard things aren't bad: My advice for the weak is to stay clear of Groo. And Arikusu. But what happened to NEF? Then again, who cares?

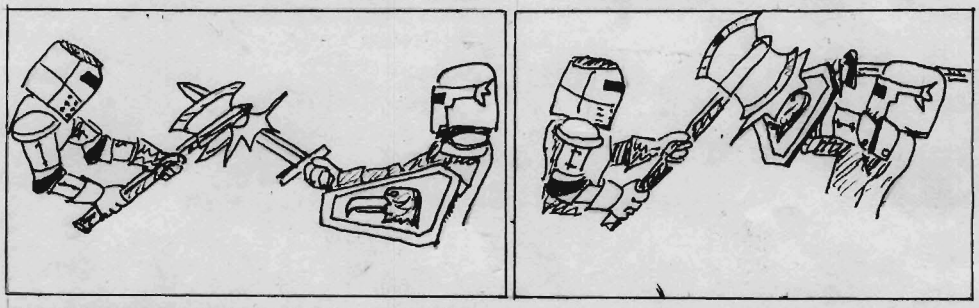

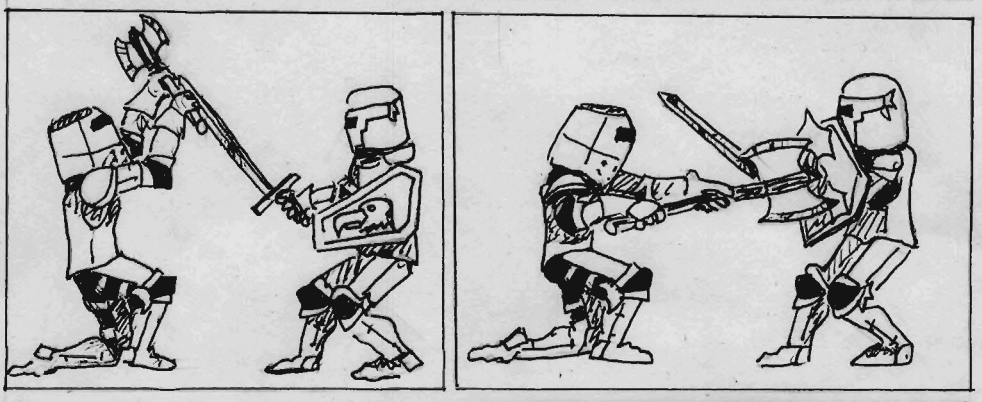

BATTLE TO DEATH

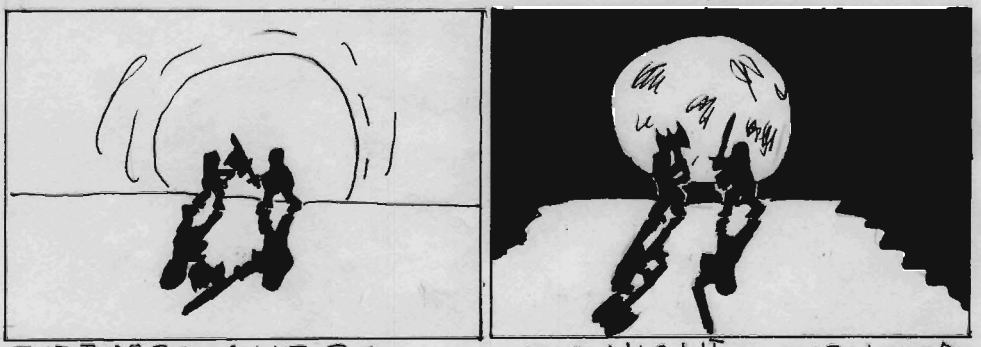

ART + STORY BY Todt

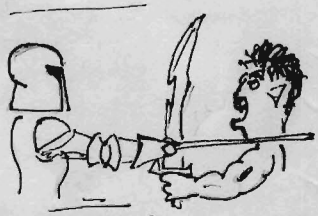

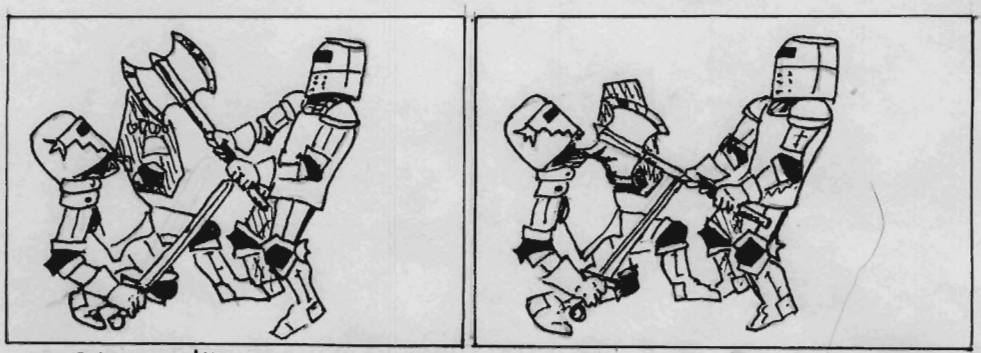

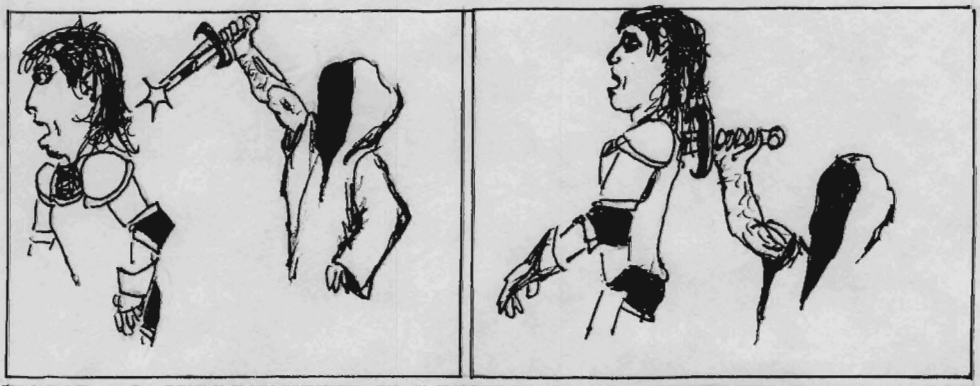

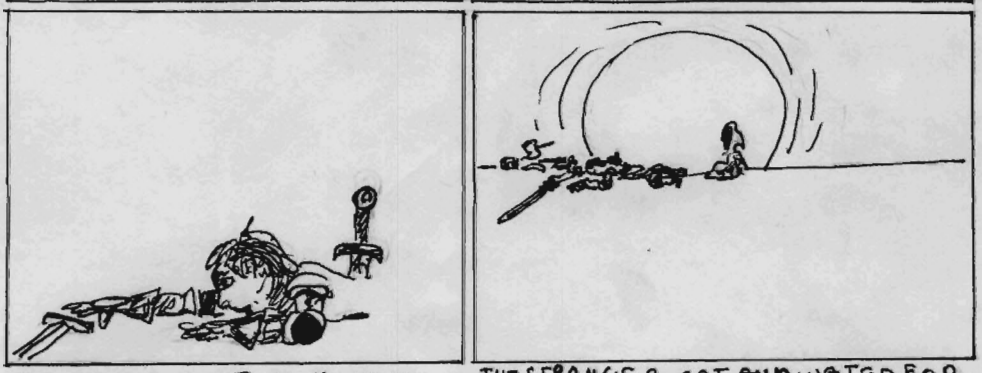

ON THE FOURTH DAY ONE FELL, SUBJECT TO THE OTHER'S WEAPON.

HE HAD BEATEN THE BEST, HE NOW IS THE BEST, HE SAW, IN HIS MIND, THE GLORY, THE WEALTH HE NOW HAS, SUDDENLY HE SAW IT, DEATH, "DEATH" HAD CREPT IN HIS MIND, HE KNEW HE WOULD DIE SOON.

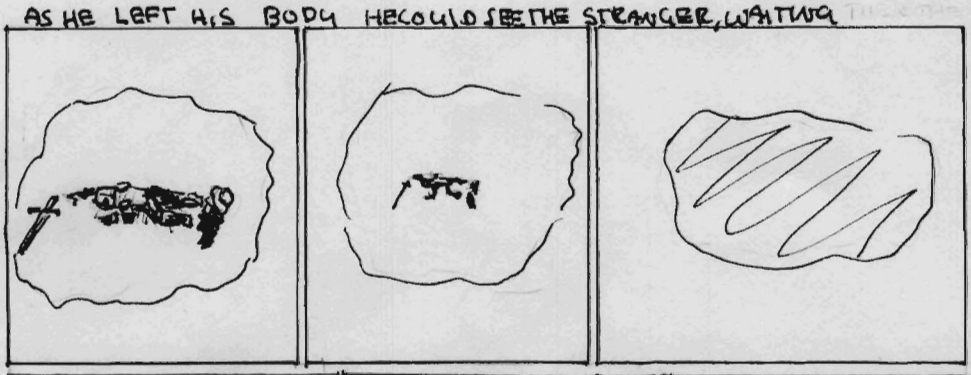

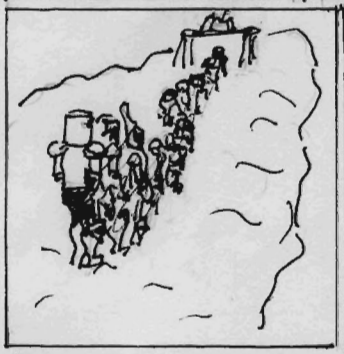

THE BLOW DID NOT KILL HIM BUT HE HAD NO MORE STRENGTH LEFT TO LIFT THE SWORD AND FIGHT BACK

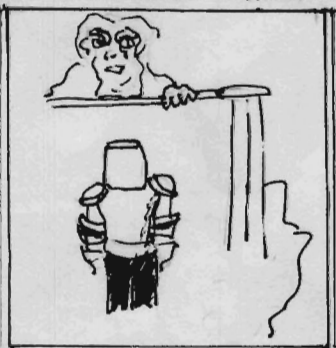

THE STRANGER SAT AND WATED FOR HIM TO DIE AS THE SUN WENT DOWN

AS HE LEFT HIS BODY HE COULD SEE THE STRANGER, WAITING

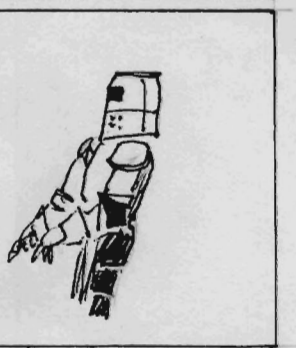

HE WAITED IN THE DEAD LINE FOR HIS TURN

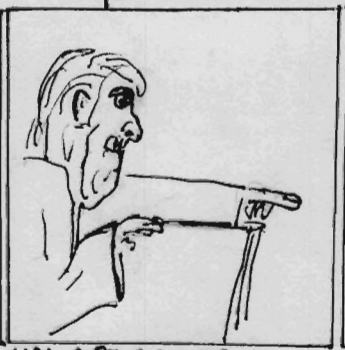

HM. IT SAYS HERE YOU WERE KILLED BY KIPOX

WHAT!! KIPOX, THE HEALING THIEF?

YOU, THE BEST KILLED BY KIPOX

YOU ARE A WIMP. NO WINGS FOR YOU NOW GO!

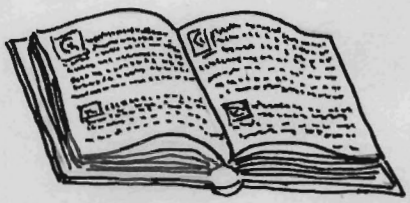

A ORC ANGEL CARRIES HIM TO HIS CLOUD

HE NOW SITS ON HIS CLOUD WITH ONLY HIS ARMOUR & HIS NAME SIR ACQUILUS.... THE END

"THE COMING"

FEATURING: THE PROPHET

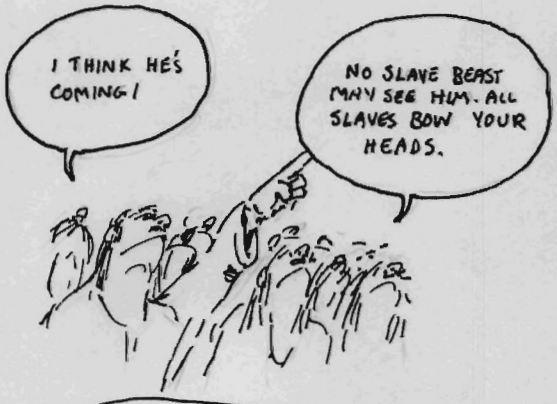

"THE GRAND REVELATION SHALL TAKE PLACE ATOP MT. SHEON GOD WILL SHOW HIMSELF AND THE WORLD WILL SEE HIS PHYSICAL APPEARANCE..."

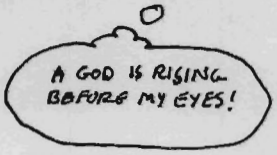

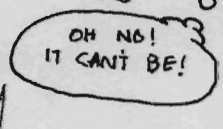

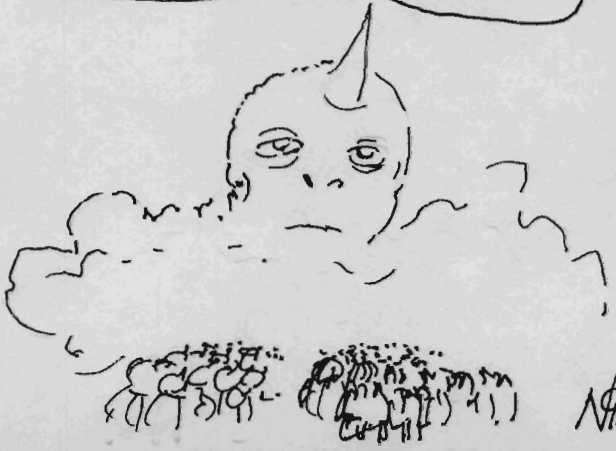

AND SO IT WAS.. THE FACELESS GOD THAT HAD BEEN WORSHIPPED FOR YEARS NOW WAS REVEALED

-THE END-

NPC 8/1/86

BACK ISSUES OF THE LOG

****
ENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE
****

ISSUE NUMBER	# AVAILABLE
#02	2
#04	3
#11	2
#16	1
#17	1
#20	3

****
G MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZ
****

