ADVENTURE LOG #2

The
Renegades
Chapter V: Wanderings

As time passed, the Renegades gathered again at Fort Maine, where Sir Warren waited anxiously.

The weather was fair on the autumn day in which the party set forth; the air was cool, the skies clear and fresh snow was upon the ground. Leisurely they trotted on horseback down the Targon Trail, until they came upon the Lowlands of Zhan. Those who looked upon them on this journey beheld an impressive sight, for all those who claimed part of the band were there united.

At the head rode Sir Aquilius Lief with his banner of renown, and Sir Warren under the sign of a mounted griffon. Behind followed Lance, clad in the colors of Dalmatia, and Corbin the Elf. Nearby rode the stout Dwarf, Tharnen of Hailstorm, ahead of Kipox Thief from Dryer Mob and Og from the shafts of Moria.

Thus they rode towards Gorgmir, the castle of Warren's liege, Sir Lassoin.

Days passed, and few dared approach the mighty group. The weather turned more foul, but still they rode on. In those days they learned of the declaration of war from North Akania towards the powerful kingdom of Zhan, and of Dalmatia's steady advance towards both Anor and Shem's Pass. These were days that would bring great change.

Things were calm, though, until at last one day. The party was nearing the outer reaches of Gorgmir, when a great rumbling of the earth was felt. And then, as they neared a halt, a giant mound of dirt approached, tearing apart the landside.

"To battle, my friends!" yelled Aquilius, charging.

"At last!" cried Warren, smiling as he spurred his horse.

"And none too soon!" cried Tharnen, dismounting and running towards the foe, axe in hand.

The others readied their bows and prepared their magiks as the warriors charged.

But as they approached, the ground rumbled, nearly sending their mounts astray. And then again, 'til their horses knees' ached, and they began to falter.

Quick as lightning, the lances of the cavaliers pierced the beast's hide, and they were happy. But then their smiles faded, for Aquilius' spear splintered and Warren was hit with a mighty blow. With a shout, Aquilius raised a silver horn to his lips and blew a clear, trailing note into the air. And in the distance, six men approached with swords blazing and battle-lust in their eyes. To the aid of the blower they had come.

The battle raged, and Warren was thrown from his steed as it collapsed in pain. Aquilius was flying about the dirt-beast on his great Pegasus, striking it at will, while lightning flared from Corbin's hands and arrows flew. But still the beast would not fall; it seemed to be unbeatable.
Hope was leaving as slowly the party's strength waned; two of the horn-fighters had fallen, and Sir Warren was lying unmoving upon the field. But in a great effort, Sir Aquilius swooped low, just as Corbin rescued the other cavalier, and thrust his sword deep into the heart of the Earth Mound: and it fell. Nothing remained but a small hillock of loose dirt.

The Renegades had triumphed once again.

Shortly therafter they reached a small stone bridge which spanned the clear-flowing river called Amethyst by the people of that land. They had now entered the lands of Gorgmir.

Soon a great castle was seen on the horizon, and warriors came to greet them.

"Hail, Sir Warren! Hail friends!"

And so it was that the Renegades enjoyed the hospitality of Sir Lassoin, lord of Gorgmir. For a week they stayed, and a great banquet was held for Sir Warren in honor of his deeds. Some say that the fair Alacia looked fondly on him that day.

On the ninth of Autumn, in the year 3111, many great Knights set forth to do battle or follow their quests. Some went to the Margron Vale to challenge the two Dragons that there dwelled. The Renegades were among these few.

In a few hours, a horseman approached, and raised his hand in peace.

"Greetings, Kipox Thief! I bring ill news from your father in Banderborough."

"And what of him?" answered Kipox, in Thieve's Cant.

"A great evil is upon the Scarlet Hills, sir. The lands about are in trouble. A shadow lingers in the skies. To prove my word to you, I speak the true name of your father: `Kander of Dryer Mob'". he returned in the same dialect.

"Welcome, friend. I'll come to my dad's side shortly. Until then, come ride with us!"

They trotted out into the rolling grass, and saw the sun set four times before they came upon the lair of the great red beast known as Hrothman.

A stillness filled the air, wrecked only by a distant beat of drums.

"Foul worshippers of the winged beast!" spoke Lance, worried.

"And we'll deal with them as the Sons of Fantasy once did to the Shemba's of Akania!" returned Aquilius, looking onward.

"Ah, I wish Lord Boromir were here to see us now. He was a great warrior." whispered Warren, dreaming.

And so they dismounted and approached a small opening in the mountain wall.

What happened within is a great tale, for the adventurers were met with fire and flails by a hundred vicious priests, and past them to great, ugly beasts. As the battle raged, the party split, and some worried on the fate of others.

Aquilius and lance became lost in great caverns, fighting their way through Formorlian Giants.

Kipox wandered into a distant room, and found another group of adventurers, the Anterior, fighting the evil priests.

The others, with Sir Warren, fought bravely in the main caverns, until their foes were dead. Leaning on his sword, Warren looked around: "There must be a way to the beast's lair! If only we could find it."

At that time, Kipox entered with three of the Anterior.

"I am called Sir Dalhad the Grand Knight, Renegades! Let us join forces, and defeat the beast together!"

"Agreed, Sir Dalhad!" spoke Sir Warren, shaking hands.

At last they found a door that led into a vast room. At the other side was an entrance to the lair itself. But no sooner had they walked in, than a voice spoke from the far side, beneath an alter of jade.

"Fools! You think that to defeat my petty priests is enouph? Burn in the fire of Hrothman!" and with that a great ball of fire flew through the room onto Dalhad. But as it hit, a ring on his finger flashed blue, and he was unscathed.

Sir Warren wasted no time, running towards the High Priest and felling him on the spot.

"And now to the beast itself!" shouted Sir Warren, and they charged.

When they entered, the giant worm looked on them with anger, and belched fire. But still the warriors attacked, and before a minute had passed, Sir Warren's sword had sunk to the hilt in the Dragon's throat.

Once again the Renegades were victorious.

As the days passed, the adventurers went their seperate ways. The weather stayed fair for the time, and the moons reached their fulls in a blue sky.

Sir Warren travelled towards distant Roarden, the capital of Zhan. He fought on his ways the Black Knight, and on the twenty-first he beheld a prophecy in his dreams.

The Anterior journeyed to Zolna, where they defended the King of North Akania as the city was besieged by the Zodian Navy.

Sir Aquilius and Lance sped towards Willian's castle, where they met. In the days that followed, Sir Aquilius slew the Marquis Abjar in a duel and took his lands, whilst Willian sided for Dalmatia as it invaded North Akania. But the greatest event of all, was that Sir Aquilius Lief slew Lord Manda Crowly in combat at Reichenhall on the third full of Numedia's three thousanth and eleventh year.

And so the tale is told by the fireside on late nights, when the winds howl and the sky is dark...

The
-Renegades-
Wrapsheet

Ordway Street, January '86
Location: The ruins of Hrothman's lair
Date : Automn 27th, 3111n
Time : First (Dawn)

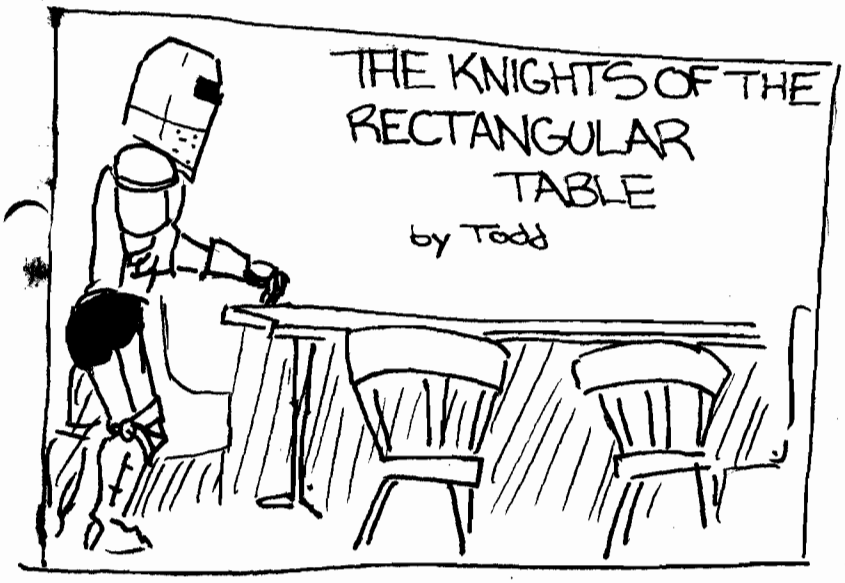

About stand the tall, dominant peaks of the mountains, turning dawn into a grey twilight. All about, fog rolls along the valley floor, and dew clings to the green life about. All around you catch the smells of morning, the smells of a fresh beginning. Before you, looking east, lies the Margron Vale. North lie the lowlands of Zhan, while south and west lie the Weatherpeaks.

NOTES:
1/Does anyone want an updated edition of the Field Guide to my world?
2/You are all together, with HP and etc. at max..
3/Good luck, Renegades!

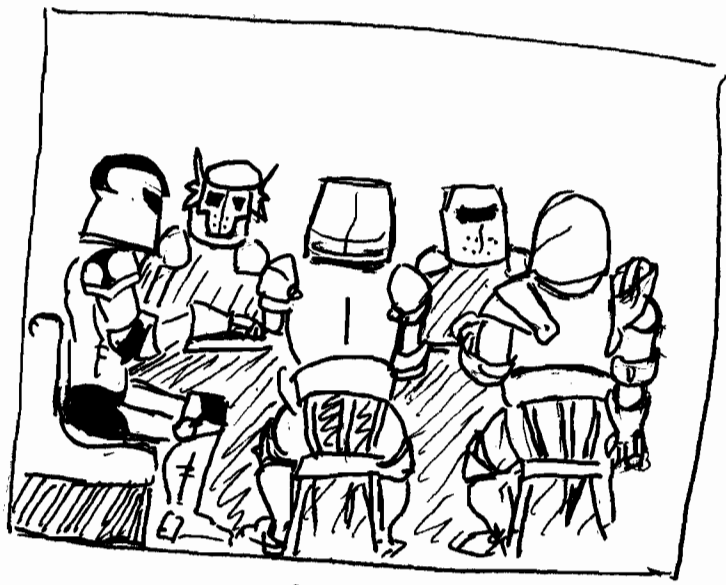

TELRHIN UPDATE

*Anor vs. Dalmatia: To date Dalmatia has thrown off the attacking forces of Anor, with no major defeats on their side. Dalmatia plans a great offensive within weeks. Anor is now allied with the neighboring Borderlands, while the Dalmatian Empire is now backed by Zhan and Lark-Han.
*Moonspoken vs. Aquitaine: The invaders from overseas have taken most of Aquitaine, though the lands of Poitain still stand free under heavy siege.
*Bardor vs. Vijmania: Though open war has not yet been declared, border troubles have increased in recent monthes. Bardor is favoured, and is backed by North Akania.
*Longmen vs. Semetria: The sea-faring Longmen from afar have taken much of Semetria's coastline. However, their attacks on the mainland have all been repelled. Dremia is rumoured to be aiding Semetria, while the Longmen are apparently backed by troops of the powerful Moonspoken.
*Dalmatia vs. North Akania: Shem's Pass has been taken along with the neighboring lands by Dalmatia. The powerful Zodian navy has come to Dalmatia's aid and taken North Akania'a coast along with the capital, Zolna.

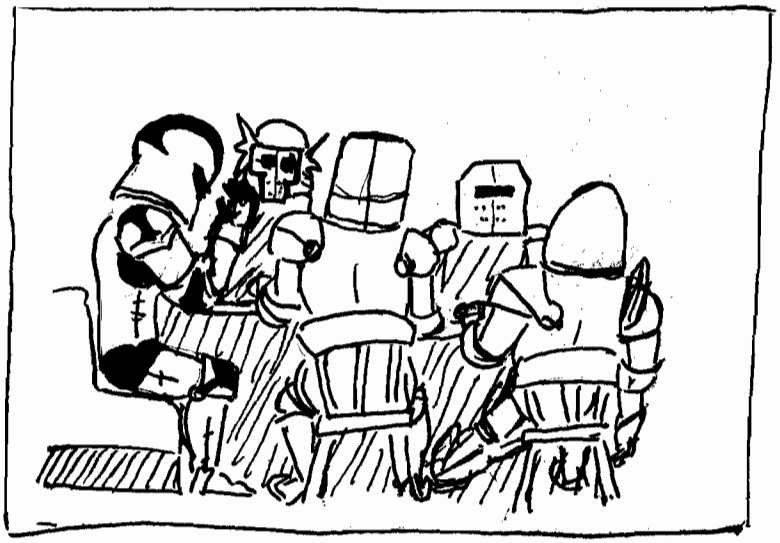

War bonds	Value	Last Month	Month Before
Anor	05pp	10pp	15pp
Aquitaine	01pp	02pp	05pp
Bardor	-	-	-
Dalmatia	50pp	30pp	31pp
Longmen	20pp	19pp	10pp
Moonspoken	30pp	28pp	18pp
North Akania	09pp	-	-
Semetria	10pp	11pp	20pp
Vijmania	-	-	-

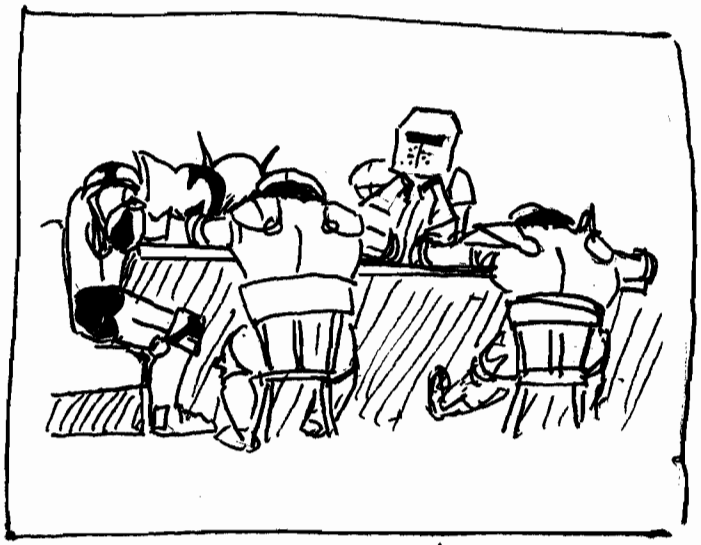

THE KNIGHTS GATHERED AROUND THE RECTANGULAR TABLE

AND WAITED FOR THE WORD

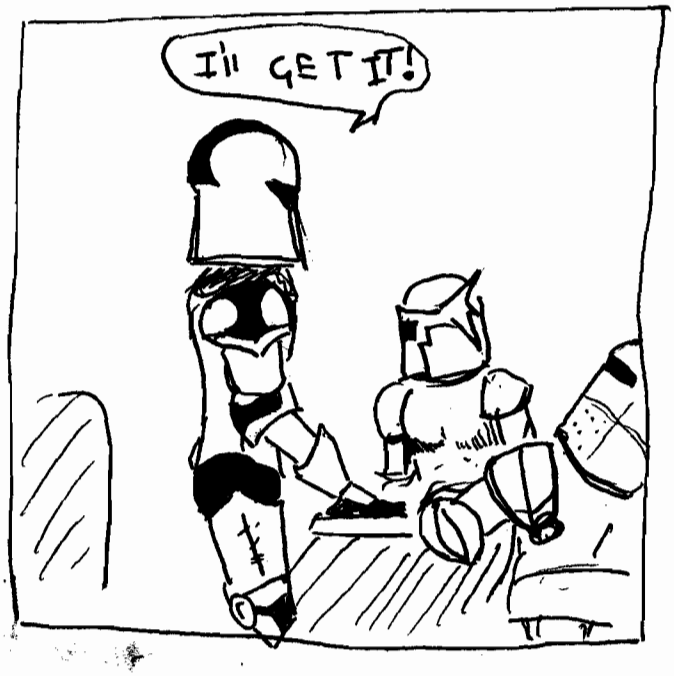

TIME PASSES WITH NO WORD

THEN SUDDENLY

todd

The Rat Page
>A Rodent's Look at our Campaigns<

by the Combat Rat Himself

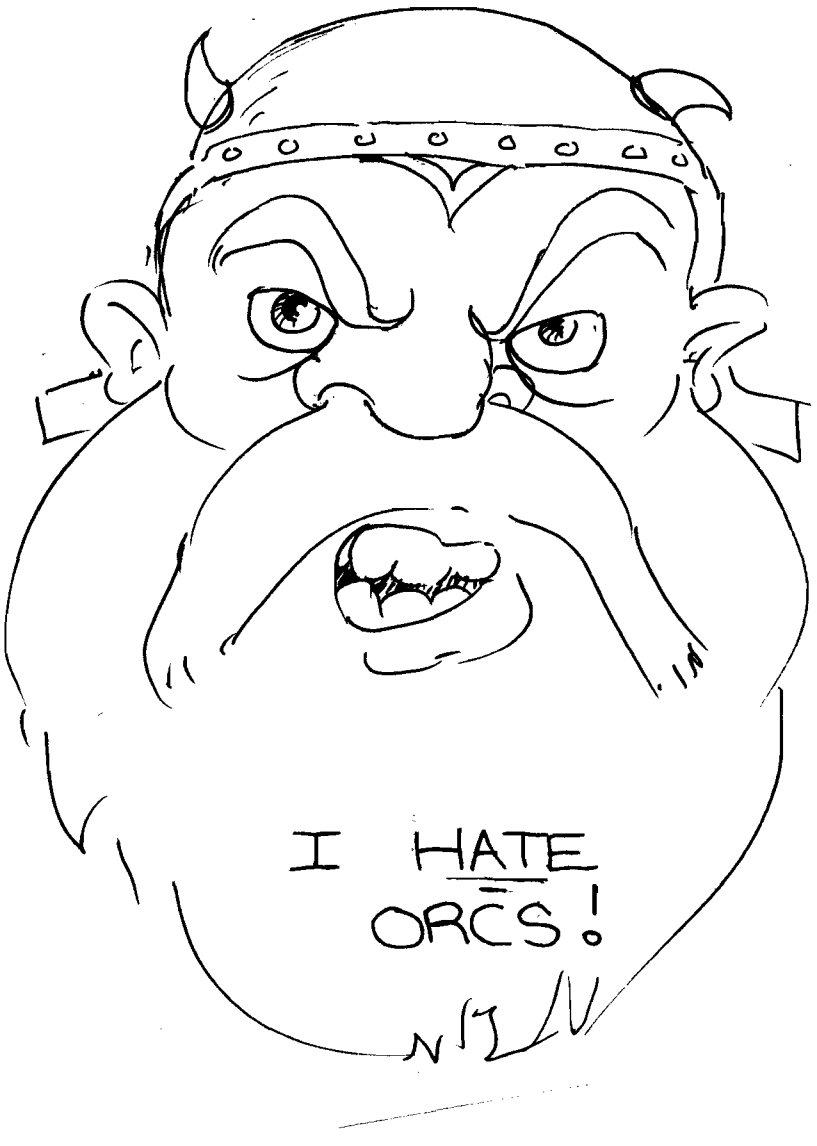

This edition I'm gonna teach you all Orcish so you can speak to football players. This is all from Dragon #75.

And(conj).....ak	Dwarf(n).....kez
Animal(n).....ragdar	East(n).....gokzek
Armor(n).....gandan	Eat(v).....gad
Army/warband(n).....joktar	Elf(n).....rekar
At(prep).....ag	Enemy(n).....rargad
Attack(v).....dak	Far(adj/adv).....gotrak
Attack(n).....dakzok	Fast(adj/adv).....tortan
Axe(n).....ekdog	Fight(v).....dek
Bed(n).....derdar	Fire(n).....detad
Big/great(adj).....jajgak	Flank(n).....togtad
Blanket(n).....derdak	Food(n).....gadduj
Break(v).....dod	For(prep).....oj
Brick(n).....kettak	Formation(n).....kejar
Bright(adj).....gatad	Front(n).....rekton
Burn(v).....det	Future(adv).....gakdar
But(conj).....ek	Gate(n).....netdag
Carry(v).....dog	Get/fetch(v).....doj
Charge(v).....kot	Go(v).....zor
Chest(n).....zekar	Going(n).....zorak
City/town(n).....ejtag	Guard(v).....dej
Climb(v).....teg	Guard(n).....dejad
Cloak(n)..... darad	Hammer(n).....gettok
Close/shut(v).....gen	Hard(adj/adv).....gegor
Cold(adj).....etar	He(n).....darag
Come(v).....zen	Helmet(n).....ozrad
Coming(n).....zenak	Horse(n).....gozak
Company(n).....roktor	Hot(adj).....dendad
Cut(v).....gek	How(adv/conj).....or
Dagger/knife(n).....jortak	Hunt(v).....jar
Danger(n).....nartag	Hunt(n).....jarag
Dark(adj).....gerdak	Human(n).....rannor
Day(n).....zandag	Hunter(n).....jardak
Deer(n).....rorad	I, me(n).....dagad
Defend(v).....gag	If(conj).....eg
Die(n).....ot	In(prep).....aj
Dig(v).....gar	Is/am/to be(v).....tot
Dog(n).....gojak	Kill(v).....dez
Down(adj/adv).....zegor	Lead(v).....jed
Drink(n).....aztar	Leader/officer(n)..jeddar
Drink(v).....az	Left(n).....rakan

Like/as(prep).....ad
Listen/hear(v).....dan
Loose(adj).....konad
Make/build/erect(v)....tek
Many(adj).....zejdad
March(v).....dok
Move(v).....tor
Near(adj).....gotrag
Night(n).....zakdag
No/negative(adv)....zozgat
North(n).....todreg
Obey(v).....jeg
Of/from(prep).....og
Open(v).....nez
Or(conj).....ok
Orc(n).....uruk
Order(v).....jen
Order(n).....jendad
Own(v).....zek
Parry(v).....gaj
Past(adv).....dotad
Rear(n).....rontak
Retreat(v).....noj
Ride(v).....rej
Right(n).....tokan
Run(v).....raz
Saddle(n).....orgad
Safe/safety(adj/n)..noztan
Scout(v).....gon
Scout(n).....gontad
Sergeant(n).....jegdan
Shield(n).....gandal
Shoot(v).....jez
Shut/close(v).....rot
Sleep(v).....der
Slow(adv).....tontag
Soft(adj).....gezan
South(n).....takren
Squad(n).....jok
Stand(v).....nak
Steal(v).....dez
Stone(n).....kordad
Stop/halt(v).....gej
Sword(n).....dotak
Take(v).....don
Thief(n).....deztej
Threaten(v).....nar
Thrust(v).....zok
Tight(adj).....kozad
To(prep).....od
Treasure/wealth(n)..doztat
Tree(n).....tadnen

Up(adv/prep).....tegat
Wall(n).....kokad
Water(n).....dozar
West(n).....gogker
What(n/adj).....ar
When(adv/conj).....an
Where(adv/conj).....er
Who/whom(n).....on
Why(adv/conj).....en
WRQX(station).....sux
Wine(n).....tagrat
With(prep).....ed
Wood(n).....dortod
Yes/affirmative(adv)tojat
You(n).....dakar

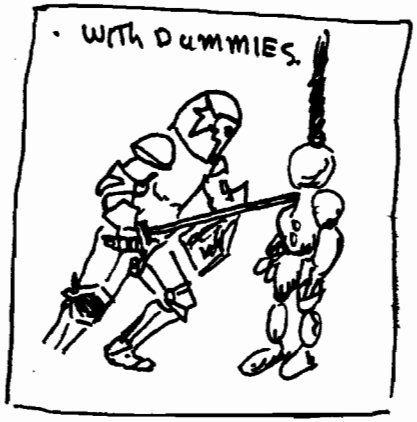

For a plural, add the suffixe `a'.
For past action or future, add `dotad' or `gakdar' as appropriate.

SIR MARCELLO

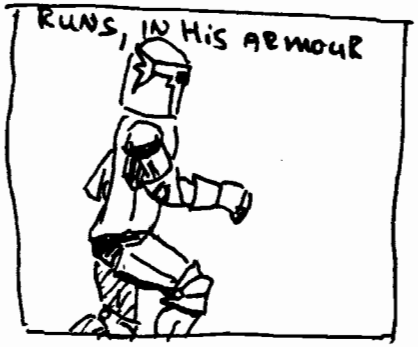

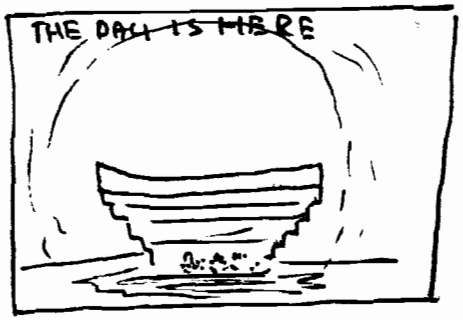

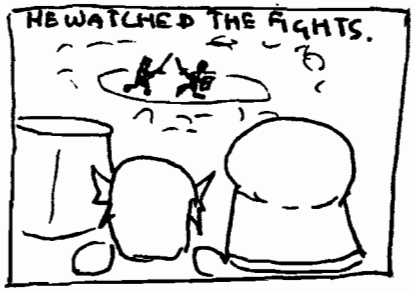

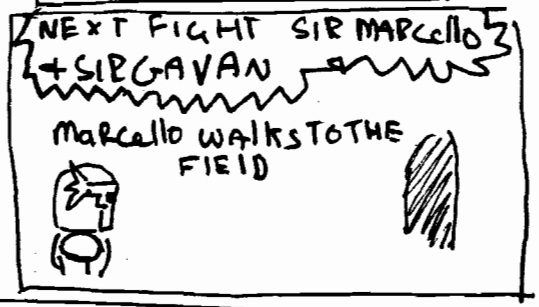

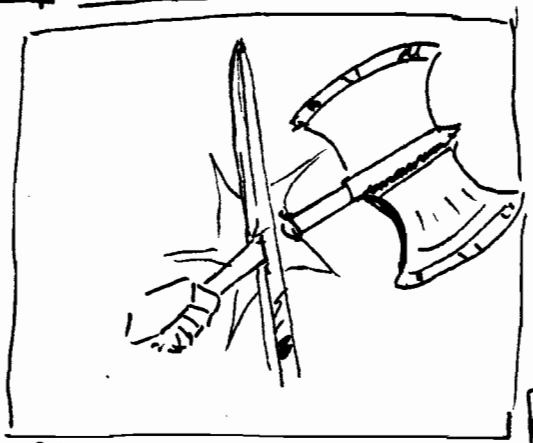

THE CHARGED EACH OTHER

SMASH, SIR MARCELLO'S SWORD BROKE SIR GAVAN'S AXE.

CONTINUED NEXT LOG

Fables of Telrhin
Esgalduin and Evil's Claw

by C. Aldridge

*I*n a time of shadow, when the towering spires of Aquitaine lay in ruins after a hundred years of war, a great Evil came. He was called the Dark One, and wherever he went, death would follow. In time, he had conquered all of Eastholm, and his troops turned the once lavish grasslands into foul deserts. And as his power grew, so did his ego; thus he built, high atop the Ashen Mountains that now divide Aquitaine from Ugar, a great fortress called Veilorg. No man dared enter. No 'man', that is...

Darkness filled the halls, and only the constant drip of retched water disturbed the eternal silence. High above the beat of drums rolled incessently. Far below, deeper than the 9th Hell, screams rose dimly into the chilled air; cries of hopelessness that would never be remembered.

But then the walls themselves stopped in wonder; from a passage in the long corridor, a thin note emerged, followed by others, until slowly, very slowly, they became a melody of sound and beauty. As the music came closer, the darkness nearly faded, transformed into a globe of shimmering light.

And high above, in the tallest spire of all Veilorg, an eye opened, then another. They looked about, and filled with rage. With a thunderous cry, the mountains shook, and all beasts cowered and hid themselves. And in that hallway, Darkness fell again.

Then high above, the Lord of Eastholm threw open the gates to his thrown room; an ebony chair in the topmost room of all Veilorg. From there, Talon could see far off Asgard, or even the Valek.

He paced to and fro, his mind bent on the one who had dared reveal himself within His own halls. He paced to and fro, and still his minions could find no one. All his evil, all his power and thought, was searching, searching...

But even as he did so, a hand crept towards him from behind his very thrown. Suddenly it darted to Talon's belt and unsheathed a fang-like knife.

In shock the Lord of Darkness turned around, his eyes wide. He stared out, and beheld an Elf, his lyre in hand, standing before him.

"Thou who darest challenge my power shalt die from such power!" with that Talon threw up a clenched fist, and opened his mouth to utter words of destruction. But his victim did not cower or quail in fear, but rather looked on, smiling. He then held aloft the knife he had filched, and spoke in a determined voice: "Strike me if thou darest, O Evil. For behold thine own blade, with which thou art able to fell thy servants at thy will. Wouldst thou wish to feel its point, O Evil?"

With that the wrath of Talon wavered, and fell. He had forged the blade to slay those who misserved him, and it had a deadly bite. He knew not what it would do to hisself, the Master. He stared at the Elf, and shot forth the power of his eyes: death to any mortal. But still the Elf stood, unblinking. Now the Lord of Darkness knew fear.

"Fool to think me mortal, O Evil. For I am Esgalduin, Full Elf from Maline."

Their eyes met: "You will die, fool!" shot Talon, blasting the thief with the power of his mind. The Elf fell to his knees, but stared on, in pain. The two struggled, but then Talon blinked; for a thin melody was rising as Esgalduin plucked the strings of his lyre.

And then, taking advantage of Evil's pause, the Elf dashed towards the exit, and thrust open the doors, turning to face the Master.

Talon saw the doors go wide, and threw his hands together and muttered harsh words.

"That's right, O Evil, seal the room! Seal it fast! Seal it tightly, so that no one may escape!"

With that Talon clenched both fists and hissed: a ring of fire encircled the room.

"Not very good, O Evil! Not good at all! For that would only stop a man or a beast, but not us! Seal it so that neither can leave! Seal the room so that we may do battle with our minds!" and as he finished, he dove through the door, just as Talon spat a last command, sending a ring of ice around the room.

"No! Never!" Talon shouted, staring in anguish at the Elf: for he had trapped himself in his own magiks, while the Elf was free.

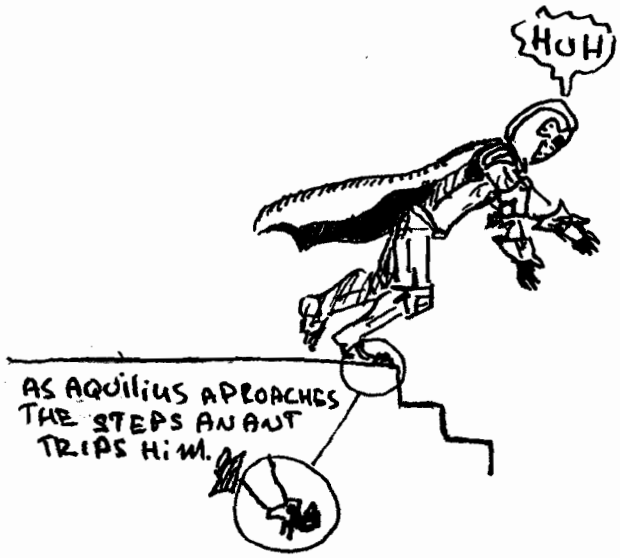

Esgalduin sighed and collapsed to the floor. He had spent his will to fight the power of Darkness. As he gathered his strength, he walked, then ran, out into the cool night air, whilst Ta[redacted]s prison tower.

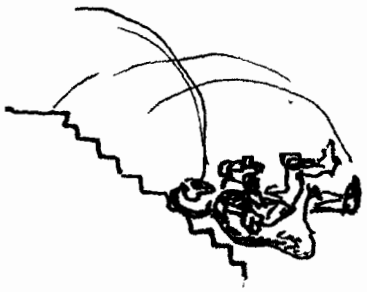

BLOPERS BLEEPS & BLUNDERS.

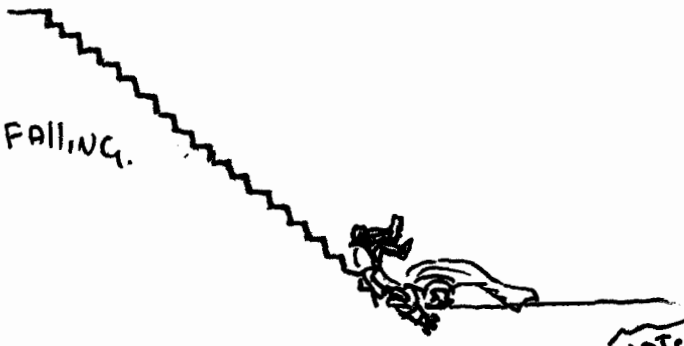

By Sir Aquilius.

FALLING.

4 NTill HE REACHED THE BOTTOM.

HE FELL IN FRONT OF HIS FOLLOWERS. THE CROWD, SOME SAY, TOUCHED THE HORIZON.

THE CROWD NOW SAW HIS GOOFINESS AND LEFT

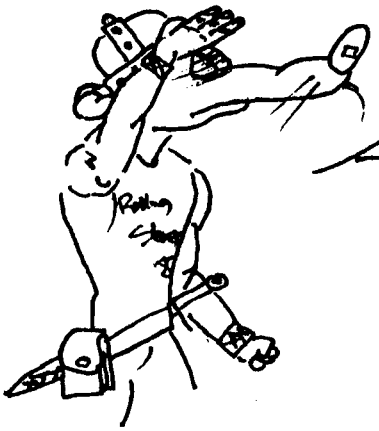

Todd

The Misadventures of the Combat Rat...

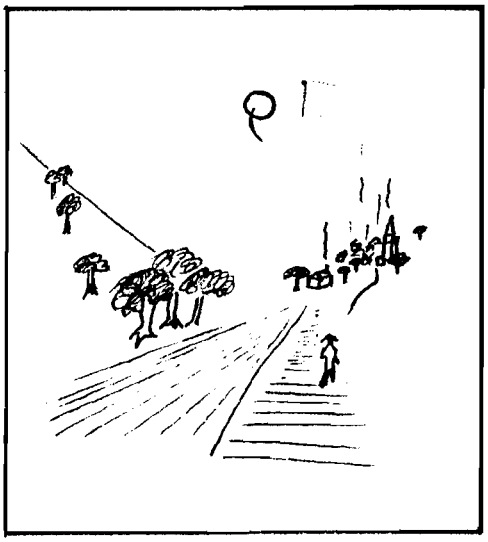

#4

by Aldridge

For those of you who came in late: don't worry, there was nothing to miss...

HMM... ONLY A FEW HOURS MARCH UNTIL THE 'TARGON TRAIL' LEADS ME INTO THE FOOTHILLS. I FIGURE I'LL BE IN URI BY NIGHT FALL...

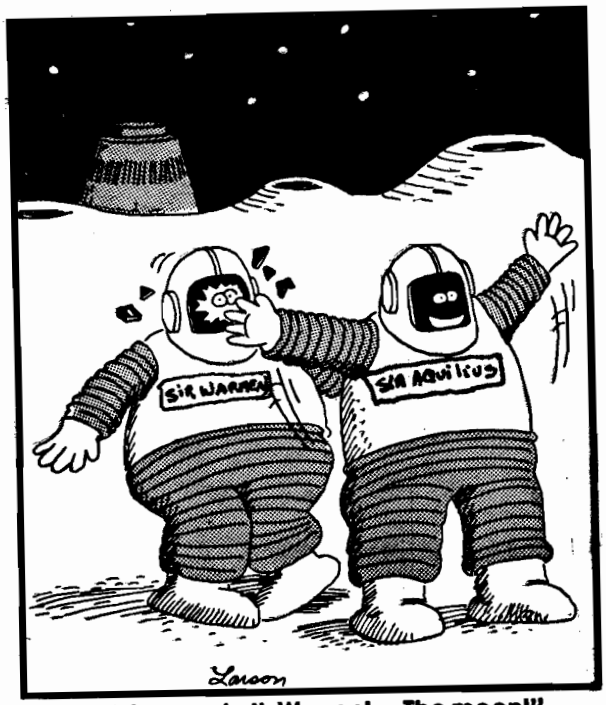

NEX LOG:
"THE MILLER'S MUG"

the FAR SIDE

by Gary Larson

"We've made it, Warren! ... The moon!"

Common medieval nightmare

Lt. BAGSNOT

"The French Spacemonger"

part 1

by Aldridge

BOOM

NEAR THE FRINGES OF KNOWN SPACE, AN EXPLOSION RIPS THROUGH THE DARKNESS...

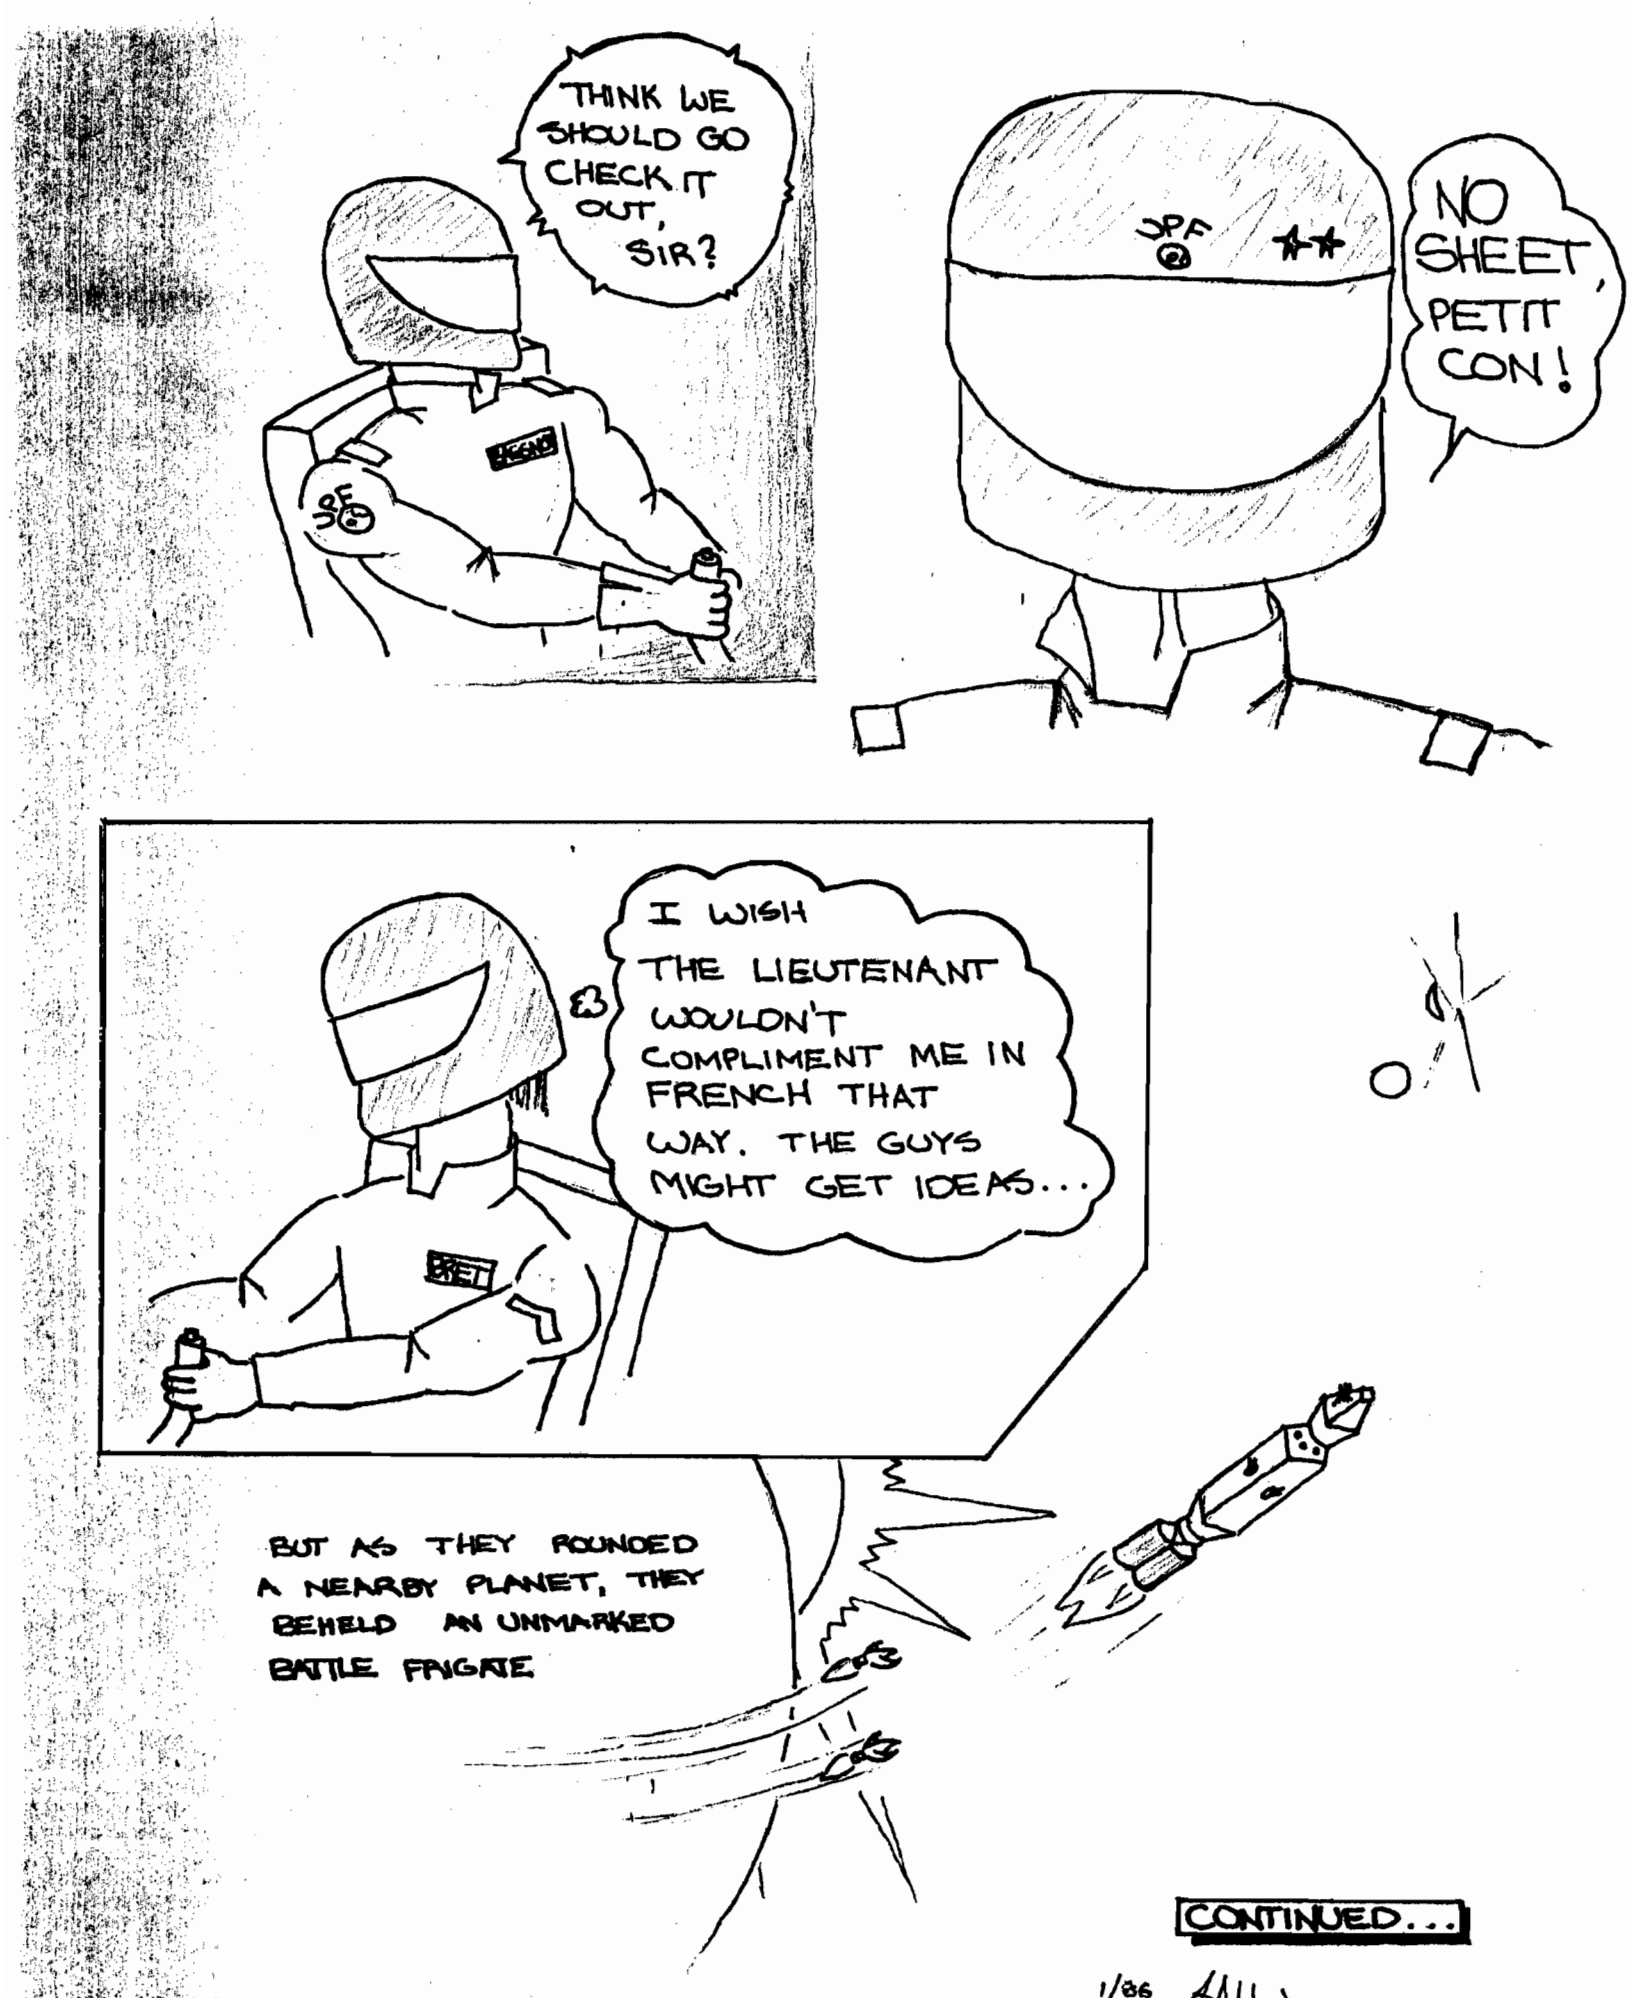

Lt BAGSNOT! D'YOU SEE THAT? WHOLE PLANET MUSTVE BLOWN! SAY, WHATTA WE DO? OVER!

Lt. BAGSNOT
"LA GRIFFE"

GROSSMA WILDCAT XV9

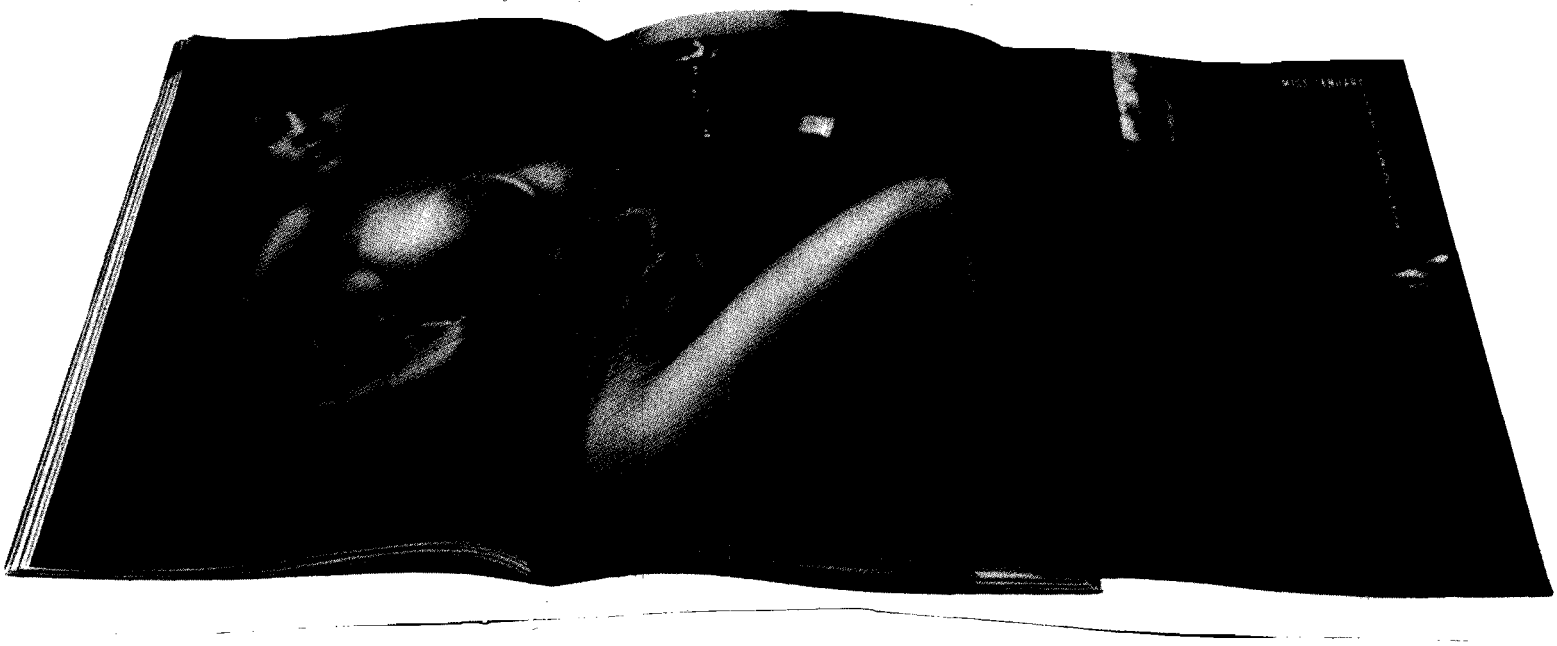

"VIVE LA PATRIE"

OF COURSE I SAW EET! DO YOU SINK I AM BLIND, YOU LITTLE PNEU CRÊVÉ? OVER!

CONTINUED...

1/86 Albridge

WHO SAYS THE ADVENTURE LOG ISN'T SEXY?

by the ol' Rat himself

For all you finks who dare say the Log isn't your source for fantastic women, take a look at this! I mean, where else can you find this without being over seventeen? Not Sports Illustrated, not Motor Trend Magazine, not Cracked, not the National Inquirer, not the Jewish Weekly! ONLY (well...) the Adventurer Log Magazine! Unfortunately, due to technical difficulties [my mother does the copying], we can't have Kimberly McArthur in every issue, but we'll sure as hell try! For issue #24 we've asked pro wrestler King Kong Bundy to pose for us. Seriously now, we'll probably have actress Leslie Ann Heathcote if this picture copies well. Why? Why add cheap sex to the ol' Log, you ask? The honest answer of a rat: Why not?. Anyway, to preview other additions to the Log, here goes: There's going to be something called `Battlecards' soon, maybe by #23. They'll be cards describing warriors in our midi-evil wars. Also, there's a new part to the Wrapsheet. At the bottom of the page, the `Telrhin Update' will tell about wars, events, warbonds and all that National Inquirer kind of stuff. And yes, it's true: you may have heard it already, but the Rat Page may have to go. I'm gonna put up one hell of a fight, that's for sure! If Chris Asshole won't put it in the Log, than I may just hand it out on my own! `The Rat Log' or something!

BACK ISSUES OF THE LOG

****
ENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE
****

ISSUE NUMBER	# AVAILABLE
#02	2
#04	3
#11	2
#16	1
#17	1
#20	2
#21	2

****
G MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZINE - THE ADVENTURE LOG MAGAZ
****

